COMMISSION SINGAPORE

Photography, Video and Image Use Policy

Photos and videos are a wonderful way to capture sporting memories, but in the wrong hands, they can cause real harm. Images shared without permission can expose someone's whereabouts, invite cyberbullying, or even be misused to create child sexual abuse material (CSAM). This is especially true for children and young persons. That's why we have clear guidelines on how images and videos should be captured, used, and shared.

When capturing images or videos of Minors

- Let participants and their parents know beforehand, what's being captured, why, and where it may be shared
- Make it easy for participants to say no, or to change their mind (e.g., provide a contact email)
- Be mindful of your angles, avoid shots that show faces clearly or place participants in compromising positions

Before you share or publish

- Review everything first. If something looks inappropriate, delete or blur it before it goes out
- Only post on official channels - not personal social media accounts
- Don't include names or other identifying details alongside the image or video
- Don't upload images to unsecured or third-party platforms, including AI
