

During the P5 Camp, how did you become a leader by serving others?

SPOT LIGHT ON OUR BEST CAMPERS

During the second day of P5 Camp, we had to do the upper-tier rope challenge. My friend and I decided to go together. When it was my turn, I cleared the first obstacle with ease. As I started on the second part of the rope course, I realised that my friend was still behind. So, I decided to check on him. I noticed that he was struggling. Instead of ignoring him, I waited for him and even gave a few words of encouragement. Eventually, he became less nervous and managed to complete the rope course.

I became a leader by helping my group mates stay calm and cheerful during our abseiling activity. Many of my groupmates were nervous and scared to go down the tall wall. I decided to volunteer to go first so that I could show them it was not so scary after all. While I was abseiling, I showed that I was confident and made funny poses as I went down. Everyone started smiling and the tense atmosphere turned into excitement and fun.

There was a day in camp where my group and I were doing low elements. One of the elements is a rope where you have to hold on to the rope and swing to get to the other side. Most of us managed to get to our ouom without falling but a few of us onot helped them get up and supported them so that they do not fall again

I kept on encouraging one of my members not to give up when she was trying abseiling because she had a fear of heights. During the short circuit obstacle course, she could not get past the tight rope as she was afraid of height even though it was only three to four metres from the ground. However, she was able to abseil down the wall which was fifteen to eighteen metres tall. It was a big improvement in such a short duration of time. I also cheered on my other teammates
